'You're the king of the English - stay away from Versailles': French left-wing politician issues chilling threat to Charles III as millions prepare to gather for France's 'Black Thursday' chaos and disruption

- Five thousands police officers were on the streets of Paris today for protests
- King and Camilla, Queen Consort, are set to arrive on Sunday for three-day visit

A French left-wing politician has issued a chilling threat to Britain's King Charles III ahead of his state visit as millions prepare to protest on 'Back Thursday', with the UK government saying there are no plans to change the royal visit.

Five thousand police officers were on the streets of Paris today as they prepared for the first day of state-sanctioned marches since President Emmanuel Macron raised the retirement age from 62 to 64 without a parliamentary vote.

There have been constant night time riots since the measure was forced through by decree last Thursday, and now millions are set to gather during the day - with the biggest airport in France blocked by demonstrators this morning.

As anger rises, the King and Camilla, the Queen Consort, have been told they will be targeted if they – as planned – arrive in Paris on Sunday for a three-day visit.

A lavish banquet due to take place on Monday at the Palace of Versailles – where Louis XVI and Queen Marie Antoinette lived before being guillotined – is already set to be moved because of the risk posed by the protesters.

The event at Versailles was meant to be the glittering highlight of the State Visit – Charles's first as monarch.

A concert was to be held in the Royal Chapel, and then dinner would have been served on Duplessis porcelain plates made during the reign of Louis XV.

But demonstrators including opposition politicians have accused Mr Emmanuel Maprou of being completely out of touch with the lives of ordinary people.

'It's amazing' said MP Sandrine Rousseau.
